

Count Me In

Take the 2020 Census

This spring, every household in the US will be asked to fill out the 2020 Census - a brief survey about all the people living in your home.

It's important to be counted, but it's especially important to count babies & young children in your household.

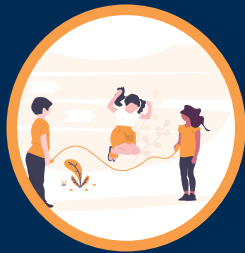

If you have a baby this year, your child will be 10 years old at the next census. In those formative years, 2020 Census data will be used to support early education and school readiness programs, and fund the school systems that foster environments for educational success. Will your child be counted?

2020 Census data will be used to support things like:

Head Start & early education

Schools & childcare programs

Public assistance like SNAP & WIC

Foster care & adoption assistance

Pell Grants for higher education

We need your help to make sure that Cape Fear Counts all kids!

Take the 2020 Census

one of three ways: online, by phone or by mail.

It's important that you count yourself and everyone in your household.
